Join us for fascinating tours of discovery and get to know Nuremberg from an entirely different point of view.

The guides of the Förderverein Nürnberger Felsengänge e.V. will take you down into "Subterranean Nuremberg" and introduce you to places that have been there for centuries but are "hidden" beneath the streets of Nuremberg.

Thanks to the stability of the Triassic sandstone, extensive complexes of cellars – in some places up to four storeys deep – could be excavated into the bedrock.

Originally, these rock-cut cellars were used primarily for the making and storing of beer. In fact, the first reference to their existence has to do with the storage of beer.

During the devastating air raids of World War II, many citizens of Nuremberg sought and found shelter in the historic beer cellars.
